1. Captain Moncrieff has done then one which he Royal United Service Institution. He said that he "set one elephant to tame another." There is something exceedingly beautiful and glorious about this contrivance; and none the less credit is due to Captain Moncrieff, because it seems, now that it has been accomplished, almost incredible that any man of work must, one would think, be tearing their hair at the thought of how great and obvious an opportunity they have left lying about them, and that with so perfect and careful an adjustment of constructive detail, that the most complete and remarkable success has been achieved. In summing broadly, we may say, that in the course of the ing broadly, we may say, that in the course of the trials which have this common and distinctive moving mass of 22 tons, no hitch worth mentioning has occurred. The working of the system has proved that all respects admirably satisfactory, far more so than its most sanguine supporters could have expected. The gun has shot accurately; the carriage has worked smoothly; it has proved rapid in operation and surprisingly easy to work, so, in fact, indeed, that on one occasion when three men worked the gun and fired five rounds at a moving object with fair rapidity. With larger detachments (ten men and a non-commissioned officer) and a little more experience, the rate of fire of one shot in a minute, and three rounds has been attained. The carriage has been

Even to glance at the many applications of the system and its remarkable advantages would furnish matter for a separate article. Here we must content ourselves as briefly as possible with the main advantages which will accrue from its adoption. In the first place, the protection which it affords seems all that is to be desired, and very much more than until lately appeared to be attainable. Not a man need be expared, and the gun itself only appears above the parapet for the few moments necessary to enable it to be laid and deliver its fire. The parapet may be as thick as is thought best, and the gun is so efficient of all materials, earth, can be employed. A thick earth parapet may, indeed, be made practically indestructible. We had tolerable evidence of this in the case of the parapet of the gun on the seaward defences of Sebastopol. The gun survives also in the accidental protection from the fact that as it only appears for a moment and leaves no trace of its whereabouts, nothing remains for an enemy to fire at. But Captain Moncrieff proposes to use the gun in a different way. He proposes to place his guns in "gun pits" thus making the natural surface of the ground his parapet. In these cases there is absolutely nothing for an enemy to destroy. When a parapet is used it becomes possible to construct a gun position on a carriage on rails, and so to run it along from one part of the work to another. And the uncertain, momentary appearance of a gun over a parapet would be scarcely less alarming to an enemy than its sudden appearance from a gun pit.

no defences are known to exist. The absence of any horizontal strain due to recoil removes the necessity for expensive adjustments for the platform, in addition to rendering reactions of that nature of a carriage on rails of which we have spoken. In point of economy the system presents immense advantages; costly iron shields or still costlier cupulas will certainly not be no longer needed. And, owing to the compactness of that strange little gun mounted in this way, one "Moncrieff" gun would be equal to at least three firing through embrasures. When gun pits are used it would be unnecessary to dig them before the guns are needed, and thus the plan of a great part of our fortifications would be kept secret, and all the expenses of repair avoided. All that would be necessary would be to decide where guns should be placed in case of need, and to have a supply of those carriages ready against an emergency.

The invention promises to effect a considerable and economical revolution in the science of defence—economical, whether we consider it in regard to the nature of the material, the number of men, or the cost of the defensive and mechanical appliances, and the saving of life; while it must add greatly to the efficiency of the defense and civilization.

THE RITUALISTIC MOVEMENT.—On Sunday one of the harvest festivals which have recently been made the occasion of the celebration of the centenary of the Ritualistic worship was celebrated at St. Paul's Church, Lambeth, of which the Rev. George F. Lee, D.C.L., is the vicar. Before the high altar a screen had been erected, on which flowers intermingled with little whitecane were tastefully arranged. The decorations specially designed for the festival were gracefully complimented by the bright columns with which the columns and roof of the church are ornamented. The morning service having been intoned, a procession in the form of a cross, the members of which marched through the aisles, the hymn of thanksgiving being chanted as it advanced. The Rev. M. Husband, of Abberstone, preached the sermon at the close of the service, taking as his text the words, "Ye are God's husbandry." Having concluded the address in a manner similar to that adopted by the Roman Catholic clergy, the rev. gentleman said that the revived branch of the Church might be composed to the tree which, supposed to be withered, was compared to fruit afresh. Those who asserted that the Ritualistic movement was a child of yesterday, which must perish tomorrow, were no wiser than the fathers of the Catholic Church had made during the past quarter of a century. Many of those present would remember the time when the altar was a table, and offering would be considered preposterous and absurd, but now they had met to return thanks to God for his temporal as well as for his spiritual gifts. It could now be said to how God had made the altar a table, that branch of his Church to which they belonged. The Almighty Father had sent all these good things to his people, and for their sins demanded punishment. He had given the Church the clergy ordained by the laying on of hands in an ever flowing stream of life, and the sacraments. Their hands were administered the bread of life and the cup of salvation, for they were the agents of God's work. During the Communion Service, which was conducted with great solemnity, the choir sang the choir song, and the incense was burnt. At the evening service the sermon was preached by the Rev. M. Cleaver, of St. Mary's, Moorgate-street, who took for his text, "The eyes of all wait upon thee, O Lord, and Thine given them their meat in due season." At the present time, he said, we need a change of Reform in Parliament, reform in the army and navy, and reform of schools, but there was one thing more than all others seemed to demand reform in the eyes of all good Christians, and that was religion. Religion should be no longer divorced from the national life, but must penetrate through the classes of the people. His wished to see the time when God's blessing would be invoked on new undertakings, such as new public works, instead of being confined to the consecration of new religious institutions. When the Legislature met in the city, those he was addressing might be inclined to underrate the benefits of a plentiful harvest, but he would remind them that they were dependent on God's daily providence, and although they did not now, as in the custom of the past, set apart a tithe of the sheep for the Church, it was no less their duty to render a return to God for the benefit which He had conferred. The temper and tone in which they did ANCIENT REMAINS.—An interesting archaeological discovery has just been made on a farm occupied by Mrs. Gilchrist, about half a mile from Stamford. While the man was ploughing the field, he struck the farmhouse the ploughshare struck against a large stone, some three or four inches only below the surface. This proved to be the lid of a massive stone coffin, buried immediately under a footpath leading across the field from Stamford to the village of St. Michael. With the assistance of a number of men and two horses, the coffin, weighing about two tons, was removed, and its contents were examined by Dr. Newman, who found them to consist chiefly of human bones in a fragrant state, apparently the remains of a tall man and a woman. Some of the teeth were in a perfect state of preservation. One bone was identified as the leg bone of a large dog. It is conjectured that the human remains belong to a Thorspale and his chieftain and his wife, and that a Thorspale for the been buried with them. In addition to the bones, fragments of a jar were found in the coin, and also a small piece of glass, which seemed to have formed part of a lachrymatory, or tear vessel. During the work of excavation some bones were discovered belonging to a third body, which had been buried in the ground on the north side of and close to the same coffin.

Terms at sale.

FOR ABSOLUTE SALE,
on Namoi River, near Township of Narrabri, all those well-known estates
COOMA and THURADULLAH, together with
THE STOCK HERBARIUM DESCRIBED.

To Capitalists, Stockowners, and others, more particularly any desirous of securing a large and healthy stock, whereby invaluable advantages would be commanded in the present season of severe drought.

TERMS MOST LIBERAL.

MESSERS. T. and A. CADELL have received instructions to sell by auction, at the Northumberland Hotel, Sydney, on SATURDAY, 20th January, 1869, at 12 o'clock.

All those ESTATES, COOMA and THURADULLAH, comprising 10,000 acres, situated on the Namoi River, comprising well grassed country, thoroughly and permanently watered;

900 head of CATTLE (more or less), to be taken at book muster, with a right of brand given in. The pre-prioritor has branded considerably over the number named.

Also,
1000 EWES (more or less), 3 years old
3000 acres of timber land

1600 hogsheads of sugar (ditto), 14 months old 4000 wethers (ditto), 3 years old

5400 sheep (more or less)

1200 lambs (more or less), 10 stock horses, and a few saddle horses to be run.

THE IMPROVEMENTS, of a most substantial character, are as follows:—

A-house, 6 rooms, 6 rooms, shingled; kitchen, 4 rooms, shingled; store, 7 rooms, shingled, with cellar beneath, and complete; a house of 6 rooms, shingled; wash-house, shingled; a house of 6 rooms, shingled; stable, and coach-house, built, yards, and other convenient outbuildings—wall of water, 3 paddocks enclosing several hundred acres.

On TURRADELBAR, or BOHERNA—A-house, 6 rooms, shingled, with verandah; yards, and paddock of several hundred acres; several huts and sheep-yards, two of 1000 acres each.

The above property offers a lucrative investment. Favorably located in the centre of our choicest farming districts, and surrounded by the most fertile and well-watered lands, it is well adapted for the raising of stock, and is well fitted for any one requiring LIGHTLY STOCKED RUNS, the estimated grazing capabilities being 30,000 sheep, or the equivalent thereto in cattle. The proprietor has a large and commodious stock of sheep, and a head station forms a most superior homestead, and, as a residence, cannot perhaps be surpassed in the district. The highly favorable inspection, and Mr. A. C. Bartlett will show the property to intending purchasers.

TASMANIA.

TUESDAY, 26th January, 1909.

To Capitalists,
ESTATE OF MOUNT VERNON,
near
GREEN PONDS, containing 4680 ACRES.

ROBERTS and CO. are favoured with the instructions from the devisee under the will of the late A. F. KEMP Esq. by public auction, at the Mart, Hobart Town, on TUESDAY, the 26th day of January, 1909, at 12 o'clock,
That certain tract of desirable and valuable property, near Green Ponds, known as
"MOUNT VERNON,"
and for nearly half a century the residence of the late A. F. KEMP Esq., It is situate on the main road from Hobart Town to Launceston (about 50 miles from the former), and comprises
4680 ACRES,
ARABLE, MARSH, AND GRAZING LAND.
600 acres are laid down in large farms, divided into convenient paddocks, with water in each, all enclosed with post and rail fencing, much of which has been lately completed.
The grazing land is in all seasons well grassed, and watered by never-failing springs.
The arable land (which is in large proportion) is of the richest description, and, having been for some years depastured by sheep, is in the best condition for the plough.

The improvements consist of a large stone mansion, most faithfully built, finished regardless of cost, and fit for the residence of a man of independent fortune, most of the rooms being large, lofty and well proportioned. Veranda

Three sides, detached kitchen, storehouse, and colling, and a new dairy, five-stall stable stall, with coachhouse and carriage room, large cruetery, extensive millinery, with oil-press, blacksmith shop, &c. &c.

The turning establishment (a convenient distance from the house) consists of a large stone barn with stables attached, stone pigsties, an excellent washhouse, with pump for water, and a carriage room. Large cruetery, &c. besides many other improvements and advantages which it is unnecessary to enumerate.

It is difficult to convey in an advertisement an adequate idea of the beauties of this property. It is bounded by the sea on the west, and is surrounded by hundreds of acres of the richest agricultural land, buildings and grounds of the richest aristocracy, situated in the midst of a beautiful district, surrounded by lightly timbered champaign, and a few miles from the sea, and the hills which the ever-flowing Jordan visits its course. The Auctioneers believe they are warranted in stating that it is one of the most desirable and profitable properties in the country, and they are prepared to receive and to satisfy any inquiry by invitation to an inspection by capitalists, as it is equally desirable for investment or occupation, and they beg to state that in consequence of the death of the late proprietor, the property must be sold.

Terms.—10 per cent. deposit; 15 per cent. at three months; 25 per cent. twelve months; and the balance may remain for three years. These instalments to bear interest at 7 per cent., and the purchaser may elect to pay cash in hand.

A plan of the estate will be on view, and cards to inspect may be obtained at the office of the Auctioneers.

For further particulars apply to Messrs. Alfred, Edwards, and Albert, or to the Auctioneers.

In the Supreme Court of New South Wales.

ON MONDAY, the 11th day of January, 1866, at noon, at Camb's Commercial Hotel, King-street, Sydney, the SHERIFF will come to the aid by public auction, unless this writ be previously satisfied.
